The Royal Poinciana Plaza is kickstarting its regular event schedule with a monthly outdoor shopping and live music event every third Saturday of the month.

The Royal Poinciana Plaza in Palm Beach is inching toward normalcy as it resumes on-property events with the launch of a monthly outdoor shopping experience.

The shopping plaza recently announced a Shop to Table series where tenants will host a pop-up kiosk in front of their stores, allowing customers to shop outdoors while social distancing.

Shops at plaza began closing mid-March as the coronavirus disease spread throughout Florida. The mandatory closures also forced it to cancel its roster of regular events, including children's program Wee Royals.

Starting at 10 a.m. Saturday, shops such as Virginia Philip Wine, Spirits & Academy will be offering samplings and special promotions, while eatery Coyo Taco will have a taco cart and flower shop Renny & Reed hosts a mini al fresco floral market. At noon, musicians Sierra Lane and Allegra Miles will play live music in the courtyard until 4 p.m.

Rolling into a new week, excited to bring some love to lots of Mothers and Grandmothers who deserve it more than ever! Our Palm Beach store is open for delivery and curbside pickup, so let us help brighten your quarantine with beautiful fresh flowers! Pictured is our Event Director, Jaime, passing the fountain outside our store at The Royal Poinciana Plaza!

Like other stores on the island, some shops are offering end-of-season sales such as Kiton's and Oscar de la Renta's half off markdowns, 20 to 70 percent off at Bogner & Piccolini and 60 percent off at Theory.

The first event in the Shop to Table monthly series kicks off from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and will continue every third Saturday of the month.
