Araskog's early fund-raising dwarfs Silvin in bid for council

By William Kelly
Daily News Staff Writer

The March 12 town election is nearly four months away, but Town Councilwoman Julie Araskog is already flexing fund-raising muscle in her race against Rene Silvin.

Araskog, a North End resident seeking a second term on the council, has amassed a war chest of $177,685.

That includes a $20,000 personal contribution and $80,000 personal loan to her campaign.

Silvin, a Midtown resident who is vice chairman of the Landmarks Preservation Commission, is attempting to bump Araskog out of her Group 2 council seat. He has listed contributions of $7,106, including a $5,000 personal loan to his campaign.

Those numbers are from the reports filed with the town clerk's office by the candidates' respective campaign treasurers. This first round of reports for the month of October was due Nov. 10.

Araskog listed contributions of up to $1,000, the legal limit, from 102 supporters. Contributors included former council members Allen Wyett, David Rosow, Robert Wildrick,

Sexy Brit steals the show at Amb. Woody Johnson's dinner

Shannon Donnelly

Well, here's a tasty gilet! Woody Johnson, who is a winter resident of Palm Beach when he's not busy being the U.S. ambassador to the Court of St. James, hosted the traditional pre-Thanksgiving dinner at Winfield House, the ambassadorial residence in London.

Among the guests was actress Elizabeth Hurley, and believe us when we tell you that nobody, but nobody, was looking at the turkey.

The actress wore a black dress with a plunging neckline that barely covered her, um, stuffing as she stood in front of a portrait of Barbara Hutton, the former Palm Beacher who sold Winfield House to the American government after World War II for $1. She posted a photo on her Instagram account.

That's right, a Yankee buck. No pounds or Euros there.

But we're sure the late millionairess isn't passing judgment from beyond, seeing as she was hardly a nun herself.

Ballet Palm Beach gave a pop-up performance of the Nutcracker Thursday at the Royal Poinciana Plaza's Arts in the Courtyard series. Youngsters and adults alike were able to meet the ballet dancers up close during the performance, which was a preview of the holiday classic the troupe will perform Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 at the Kravis Center.

Richard René Silvin for Palm Beach Town Council, Group 2 VOTE ON MARCH 12!

"After 5 years on the Landmarks Preservation Commission, I am ready to bring my proven record of being a mediator and a moderate voice to the Town Council."

I understand that an effective Town Council member must carefully balance individual citizens' rights and concerns, with the needs of our evolving town.

Palm Beach is recovering from a budgetary gap, and I will be a competent team player to assist managing a fiscally sound future.

The high turnover among town employees, especially the police force, concerns me. Palm Beach needs competitive salaries, benefits and retirement packages, in order to attract and retain long-term committed police officers to ensure residents' continued safety and quality of life.

I am eager to bring my business experience to work on controlling the costs of our major construction projects: Undergrounding, the new recreation center, town docks, and beach replenishment.
